

HOLLY WILLIAMS

By Heather Byrd

Singer-songwriter and now boutique owner (H. Audrey in Green Hills' new Hill Center), Holly Williams is one busy lady.

Between shopping trips around the world to fill her closet and her store, recording her new album (due out in the spring on MCA) and jumping on stage for surprise appearances with Dewey Cox and her father, country legend Hank Williams Jr., it's amazing she finds time to catch her breath!

Thankfully, ATR was able to catch up with Williams at her brand-new Belmont-area loft, where we took a peek inside her closet to see what this fashionista holds most dear.

There were amazing frocks from Gucci and Charles Chang Lima, of course, but we were more surprised to find things such as her coveted New Kids on The Block bath slippers, which she picked up from their merch stand when they played Starwood Amphitheatre more than a decade ago. (Her favorite "Kid" was Joey.)

Most prized of all is a gift from her father, the gold ring adorned with a diamond guitar that he has worn on every album cover since he was 17.

Holly's dad gave her this diamond guitar ring. He has worn it on every album cover since he was 17.

Holly kicks it old school with her New Kids on The Block bath slippers, but you know she keeps it real by adding an Alexander McQueen scarf.
